

Collaborate, don't compete

Collaboration, and the resulting successes, creates a sense of pride and inclusiveness among our teams, and for us as individuals. We benefit by broadening our perspectives and skill sets in order to create the best end product. We encourage you to use this sheet as a roadmap for bringing more collaboration into your life.

PART I: DEFINE A CHALLENGE YOU ARE FACING OR A GOAL YOU WOULD LIKE TO WORK TOWARDS

Consider a recent challenge you are facing at work or in your personal life. Are you stuck on elevating a project to its next level? Or maybe you are stuck on how you can elevate yourself to the next level? Define what the challenge is and then describe what your ultimate goal would be.

PART II: DIVING DEEPER

Use this next section to determine the best ways to move towards your goal and incorporate more collaboration into your life. Remember: you can have multiple challenges and goals! You may even choose to do this exercise per category of life: work, self, relationship, and community. Think big picture and outside of the box.

People I'd Like to Collaborate With

Who have you been wanting to partner with?

Is there someone who you've been wanting to ask for help from, or offer help to?

What I Can Offer Others

What are some skills that you have that could benefit others? Organizational? Creativity?

Collaboration Challenge

Ways I'd Like to Grow/Learn

What have you been wanting to learn or are there skills you want to enhance at work or in your personal life?

Ready, Set, ACTION

Now it's time to make an action plan of when and how you plan to collaborate!

Write down 3 action steps for the following:

1. Who are you going to reach out to?
2. What are you going to offer?
3. What do you hope to learn or gain?
